"Summer time is girl time," says this Janie to herself as she puts on her frilliest frock and filiest laces and bands her supple waist with her prettiest sash and rushes down the flower-lined walk to where the hammock swings. Here she has promised to meet Tom. At thought of him she blushes pink as the roses that bend to caress her cheek as she sinks into the hammock.

Tom, coming within the cool, quiet shade from the dusty and noise-laden streets, thinks that Janie is the sweetest thing the joyous summer day can

TOOK PRUNE JUICE AND PUMPKIN SEED

After Everything Else Had Failed the United Doctors Took Charge and Gave Relief.

The old fashioned ideas and superstitions in regard to treating stomach trouble is fast becoming a thing of the past, and today the great specialists in medicine are using science to cure where before invalidism and death made great inroads.

An interesting case from Union City, Indiana, is reported by the United Doctors, those expert medical specialists who have their South Bend Institute located on the second floor of the Toepf Building, on So. Main St., opposite the Post Office. The case is that of Mr. E. E. Frazee, who writes as follows:

"To the Public:
I am a victim of stomach trouble, and ever since I was a mere child I have suffered with it. To be able to sit down and enjoy a full meal and eat as I have watched others eat, is something I have never had the privilege to enjoy. From early childhood I have been constipated and bloated about the stomach. Our old family doctor used to console my parents with the hackneyed expression, 'Oh, he's wormy, he'll outgrow it,' but I never did.

Since I can remember that gaseous distention of my stomach has been my constant companion—until now—but of that later. I have tried everything from a diet of prune juice to pumpkin seed tea, but no use, the gas stayed with me. What little food I did eat seemed to fairly turn to gas, and I became weak and nervous. As I grew older this trouble grew proportionately worse, until the last few months I have not been able to digest scarcely anything. Through this digestive trouble my liver became involved, and my skin turned to a yellowish hue. I also became weaker and more nervous, until I became so weak I could not help my father on the farm.

This was my deplorable condition when I went to Muncie and applied at the Institute of the United Doctors for an examination. More to see if they knew what my trouble was than for treatment, that I had begun to accept as a matter that could not be changed. The specialist said my trouble could most certainly be relieved, and in time cured. This seemed incredible, but like a drowning man grasping at a straw, promised a ray of hope. I have treated with them for two months, and so great is the change in my condition that I am hardly able to believe it myself. My old enemy, gas, has almost entirely disappeared, can now enjoy a "square" meal. I am gaining my strength rapidly. I am no longer nervous, my skin is clearing up, and I am feeling like an entirely different person. I feel that I am going to get well, and when I do I shall be glad to write another letter for publication.

STATEMENT No. 3.

PAYMENT of FINES

Among the fifteen hundred individuals brought before the City Court each year for a hundred or more different kinds of offenses there are a large number of residents, who are required to serve jail sentences, when their offenses did not justify such a sentence, because they are immediately unable to pay a fine. This is in effect sending people to jail because they are poor instead of their offense. For this class of cases I advocate the justice of permitting the paying of fines in installments. This is also the best means of preventing a repetition of the offense.
